Weekly Legislative Report # 1

Week ending January 15, 2016

Short Session Expected

The Georgia General Assembly launched the second half of its two-year term on Monday, January 11th with an eye towards completing its work in a compressed timeframe. The House and Senate are limited to no more than 40 legislative meeting days (recess days do not count), but one veteran legislator said he wasn't convinced all of them would be used. Regardless, leadership has assured members they would not be in session past March 24th, the day before Good Friday. It's an election year and officials want to get back home to campaign . . . and perhaps raise a little money, as they are prohibited from doing so while in session.

Beyond the normal start-up fanfare, there were two big items of actual news this week – the Governor's spending plan for the motor fuel gas tax and his recommendations for the FY 2017 state budget.

The FY 2017 Budget

The state constitution requires that the General Assembly pass a balanced budget each year, with the appropriations bill beginning its journey in the House of Representatives. However, tradition dictates that the Governor provide a "budget report" that puts on paper his recommendations for state spending. The Governor also gets to set the official revenue estimate - a figure which state spending cannot exceed. Plus, the Governor has the ability to veto specific line items in the budget, so it is incumbent on both the executive and legislative branches to exercise some degree of cooperation.

On Thursday the Governor's Budget Report was distributed to legislators and made public online at opb.georgia.gov. FY 2017 state spending has been set at $23.7 billion based on a predicted more than 4% increase in tax revenues (about 45% of which will be generated by the 2015 Transportation Funding Act). While total spending is the most ever, Georgia's population – including those using services such as schools, roads, healthcare, etc. -- has also grown considerably. Chris Riley, Governor Deal's Chief of Staff, told reporters Thursday that the budget is about equivalent to 1998 spending when calculated on a per-resident basis.

Some FY 2017 Budget Highlights:

- A 3% pay raise for state employees.
- Additional funds for four state agencies -- Public Health, Behavioral Health, Juvenile Justice and Corrections -- to provide larger than 3% raises in high-turnover positions.
- $300 million to school districts intended to give school teachers a 3% pay increase. (Deal warned administrators that don't pass the money along that they put their future flexibility to spend state dollars in jeopardy.)
- $825 million for transportation infrastructure (primarily bridge repair and road resurfacing and expansion- see next heading).
- $26.5 million for expenses associated with new Hepatitis C and Cystic Fibrosis drugs.
- $4.7 million for 20 additional GBI agents.
- $10 million for Regional Economic Business Assistance (REBA) grants.
- $10 million for the One Georgia Authority for rural economic development projects.
- $2.1 million in new state funds to complete the phase-in (combines years 6 and 7) of the revised grant-in-aid funding formula to hold harmless county public health departments.
- $7.9 million for 174 additional case workers and 10 kinship navigators to manage increasing child abuse and neglect caseloads.
- $51.5 million for costs associated with the increased number of children in state custody.
- $1 million for 11 new adult protective service caseworkers and program expenses.
- $2 million to increase funds for 1,000 Non-Medicaid Home and Community Based Service slots.
- $8.9 million for salary adjustment for direct care staff to reduce the turnover rate of behavioral health workers.
- $11.9 million for a rate increase for providers under the Comprehensive Supports Waiver Program (COMP) for individuals with developmental disabilities.
- $13 million in bonds to renovate Metro State Prison to serve as a re-entry facility that will support efforts to reduce recidivism and promote successful re-entry of offenders returning to the Metro Atlanta area.

Transportation Infrastructure

As legislation to raise taxes on motor fuel was being debated last session, the promise of "transparency" in the process and subsequent spending was repeated often. Well, that's one commitment that public officials have delivered on. The Georgia Department of Transportation has enhanced its web site so that anyone can access the plans for transportation infrastructure projects in their hometown or elsewhere in the state. The site, www.garoads.org, allows a visitor to examine projects by county, house/senate district, or congressional district, and includes several charts that show anticipated project spending by year. (See example below.)

Bridge Projects

Prior & Forecast Funds for Bridge Projects

(TFA is last year's Transportation Funding Act)

There is also a state map showing the location of planned infrastructure projects for the next 18 months (primarily bridges and resurfacing) and a 10-year view of plans to increase Georgia's mobility and freight corridors (bottom right of home page).

Governor Deal told a press conference that over the next 18 months the plans call for initiating projects that would:

- Quadruple the current rate of resurfacing (2500 miles of state routes and interstates)
- Double the number of completely new replacement bridges (118)
- Double the routine maintenance and rehab on bridges (300)
- Widen 36 roads from two lanes to four lanes
- Upgrade 109 intersections

The state expects the new tax structure for motor fuels to generate $800 million to $1 billion per year for transportation infrastructure projects over the next decade.

Next Week

The legislature will be in recess Monday and Tuesday, but unlike recent years, will be in session Wednesday through Friday for Legislative Days 6-8. Governor Deal will address the Joint Appropriations Committees on Tuesday, as will the State's Fiscal Economist and 11 state agency heads. Appropriations subcommittees will hold hearings on the FY 16 Amended Budget on Wednesday and Thursday, with Friday reserved for any leftover testimony, if needed.

Week ending January 15, 2016
