Weekly Legislative Report # 2

Week Ending January 19, 2018

Despite rough weather and icy roads, the General Assembly was able to log in the two previously scheduled legislative days last week by incorporating a late start and shifting around some planned budget hearings and committee meetings.

Budget Projections

The kick-off meeting of the Joint Appropriations Committees featured Gov. Nathan Deal, along with State Economist Ken Heaghey. Deal said that on a per capita basis his \$26 billion budget recommendation ($50 billion including federal funds) was on par with Fiscal Years 2006 and 2007, prior to the great recession. To emphasize his stewardship, Deal pointed out that the number of state employees has declined from 70,716 in 2008 to 58,642 currently, even as the state's population has increased. He also pointed to his changes in the criminal justice system that has dramatically reduced the projected growth in Georgia's prisons – saving the state hundreds of millions of dollars.

While teachers did not get a raise this year, the Governor said it was necessary to cordon off $362 million for the Teachers Retirement System to fully fund the actuarially-determined employer contributions required to keep the system on firm footing.

Heaghey pegged anticipated revenue growth in FY 2019 at 3.7%, a bit less than the current year, but with an important caveat. Heaghey said the projections do not take into account the impact of the federal tax bill passed by Congress in December. He told assembled legislators that officials must do more work to decipher the effect on state revenues of more than 200 provisions in the new law.

Here are a few other Budget highlights:

- Medicaid funding is increased by more than a quarter-billion dollars.
- HOPE scholarship payouts are to be increased by 3%, at a total of $68 million.

- Approximately $45 million is added for various additional and expanded mental health services – with programs for children being a specific target.
- $7.5 million in bond funds will go towards construction of a pedestrian mall where the Georgia Dome once sat near the Georgia World Congress Center.
- Again, thanks to HB 170 which passed in 2015, $100 million in bond funding will provide road and bridge repair and replacement across the state.

Adoption Issue

The big policy issue early in this year's session has been the comprehensive revision of Georgia's adoption laws. The need for such a revision is a point without contention under the gold dome. Last session the House passed HB 159 to accomplish that end, but the bill got hung up over a Senate committee amendment that permitted adoption agencies to refuse service to same-sex couples. Because of the amendment, the full Senate was unable to pass a "clean" bill in the waning hours of the last legislative day, and the topic has been a sore point between the chambers ever since. Lt. Gov. Casey Cagle, who wants to get elected Governor in November, promised the matter would be addressed early this session. Thus, on Thursday, Legislative Day 5, the Senate passed the bill without the offending amendment – or at least without THAT offending amendment.

The Senate added a different amendment this time, the contents of HB 359, a measure that passed both houses last session but was vetoed by Gov. Deal. This amendment has to do with parents' ability to temporarily transfer power of attorney for a minor child over to a relative, or even a non-profit entity. An oft-cited example – when being deployed overseas by the military, a single parent could transfer a child's power of attorney to a grandparent for one year without going through more elaborate adoption procedures.

Here are the first two sentences from the Governor's two-paragraph veto message from 2017:

House Bill 359, while well-intentioned, creates a parallel and unchecked system to our Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS), unintentionally placing children at risk. The Power of Attorney created by HB 359 allows parents and "agents" to go around the well-established confines of legal adoption and/or our child welfare system, granting a power of attorney for a child to an individual, or even a non-profit corporation, with no oversight.

The Governor went on to ask the legislature to address the issue more thoroughly when it revisited HB 159 this session. But, the language in the amendment is the same as in the original bill. The Senate passed HB 159 by an easy 40-13 margin and it was immediately transmitted back to the House for consideration of the changes.

Slight Uptick to Unemployment Rate

Georgia ended the year with a very slight uptick in the unemployment rate, from 4.3% to 4.4% during December. The national rate came in at only 4.1%

Amazon HQ2

Atlanta was among 20 cities that made the semi-final cut for consideration by Amazon as the venue for its second headquarters location. Gov. Deal has indicated that he would call a special session later this year should one be required to pass legislation formalizing incentives to lure the massive investment opportunity to the state.

Federal Government Shutdown

It's not entirely clear how the federal government shutdown will affect Georgia, but the impact will certainly grow if the stalemate goes on for a lengthy period. There are tens of thousands of federal employees in the state and Georgia's budget depends on roughly $24 million in federal funds. However, federal dollars are delivered under a variety of programs and adhere to a variety of regulations. Will Meals on Wheels be cut back? Will the shutdown go on long enough for the feds to stop sending funds to Georgia for Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP)? There are many questions, with few definitive answers at this writing. We will continue to monitor.

Next Week

The General Assembly is scheduled to meet Monday through Thursday next week. House Appropriations Subcommittees will hold hearings on the Amended FY 2018 budget starting Monday morning.
